J.J. Johnson - Posted: 06.21.00

What does a guy have to do?

In a recent wire story where I was quoted about the removal of the plaques from the Texas Courthouse, I was described by the Associated Press guy as...

Well, I'll just show you the excerpt:

"J.J. Johnson, editor in chief of The Sierra Times, an Internet publication, and self-proclaimed "American of African descent," said, "I hope Gov. Bush changes his mind because a lot of [plaque] defendants, which are millions of people, are going to wonder if he's going to do this as president."

Self Proclaimed???

Guess it doesn't show, huh?

Yes, Associated Press - and the rest of you white liberals who just HAVE to pin a label on us; I am an American of African descent. Let me clear it up for you folks so there is no confusion:

I was not born in Africa.

I have never been to Africa, (might like to visit one day, perhaps.)

I have a friend named Robbie Noel. He's a white guy. He was born on the African Continent. He is a nationalized American citizen. He is an African American.

We at Sierra Times would appreciate it if the left-wing would report their news without using their racist labels. Strange, I didn't see them reporting the armed thugs who terrorized the Texas GOP convention just down the road where I was speaking as the "African American Panthers."

And what do we get as a result? New York City now joining in on suing gun makers, and Jesse Jackson taking up the cause of the "self-proclaimed" Black Panthers. Will the folks from the Big Apple use Texas Republican delegates as witnesses?

One of the points that's being made this week is that the left wing extremists (many of whom happen to infest congress) don't really want gun control, nor do they want to remove guns from society. What they really want is an un-armed opposition. So long as one takes marching orders from Moscow, Havana, or Beijing they can parade around with all the firepower they want.

But let a white guy, a conservative black guy, or just some poor guy who wants to defend his home against Elian-grabbing goons, carry a gun openly and every lefty known to man will be pushing to call out the National Guard, kill the women and children, then swear their fingers were never on the trigger.

Meanwhile, like the other Confederate Heritage Supporters, according to the "self-proclaimed," mainstream news media, J.J. Johnson is too stupid to know where his ancestors came from.

Good thing they didn't show my photo (after taking nearly 30 of them.) They would have their loyal readers more confused than they are now.

One more thing:

To the NAACP of Austin, Texas:

H.K. Edgerton and I never admitted speaking for the entire black community, nor do we have the arrogance to think we can. And don't even THINK that anyone gave you that right, either. You see, black people (read: Americans of African descent) are more than capable of speaking for themselves. The fact that Gary Bledsoe & Co. can't comprehend this means you NAACP folks may need some "sensitivity training."

Your racism is showing.
